

Cuba PW Parleys Still On

CPYRGHT

Negotiations for the release of 1,113 Cuban invasion prisoners have been kept open despite the crisis, it was announced yesterday by James B. Donovan, attorney for the Cuban Family Committee for the Liberation of Prisoners of War. Donovan also said that three top officials of the Family Committee would fly here from Havana for a press conference.

HE IDENTIFIED them as Mrs. Berta Barreto, chief liaison representative to the Castro government, her husband, Jesus, and Alvaro Sanchez Jr., national chairman of the committee.

Donovan said Sanchez and Mrs. Barreto visited groups of prisoners Saturday in Principe Castle jail in Havana and in the Isle of Pines prison.

He said both would return to Havana "in the near future." Sanchez, he added, has been in Havana since August when Donovan re-opened negotiations with Premier Castro for release of prisoners.
